

Are low-cost batteries worth it?

For high-drain devices, low-cost batteries may only be fractionally cheaper per hour of intensive use than some of our Best Buys. When the latter will last longer, is the extra hassle of buying, replacing and recycling them more often worth such a small saving? Log in to reveal our pick of the best batteries in our tests. What type of battery should I buy?

Shop around for AA and AAA batteries and the main types you'll find are alkaline and lithium disposable batteries. Lithium batteries last a lot longer in more energy intensive devices. We've found that they can give you 2-3 hours more power than an alkaline battery. But they're also much more expensive.

Do batteries rank better than other brands?

Ranking brands is different from ranking batteries, of course, and it turns out to be a lot more complicated. You cannot necessarily trust that every battery made by one brand is automatically better than every comparable battery from any other given brand.

Which AA batteries are best?

We've compared Energizer, Duracell and Panasonic batteries with supermarket own-brand batteries, such as Aldi, Morrisons, Lidl and Sainsbury's, to find the very best. Put a set of one of our Best Buy AA disposable batteries in your most power-hungry devices, such as a camera or torch, and they will last over three hours longer than the worst.

Are best buy batteries any good?

Typically, the Best Buys are also some of the priciest batteries. However, you can save money by opting for high scoring own-brand batteries, where a pack of eight is just a fraction of the price of other Best Buys. Are GP ultra batteries a good choice?

That makes these batteries a good choice for lower-drain use, such as clocks and remote controls. While the GP Ultra batteries may be slightly more flexible, if you're on a tighter budget, these are a great choice, particularly if you want to buy in bulk.
